We've done our own analytics work to explore the benefits of this new technology and its potential for the future. The goal of this research was to understand the difference in the new player models and AI engine with and without the inclusion of HMT. Furthermore, we wanted to determine whether any improvements could be seen in terms of player ratings, skill creation and player potential. This research is based on a selection of players from England's U18 and U19 International teams. Please note: FIFA 22 is still in development, so results may change as we add new features to the engine. Furthermore, the final build will be tested on multiple platforms with multiple build iterations. This research is based on a build tested on a high-end PC. Player models Both the men's and women's National team players in this sample performed a few tests to confirm their movements, tackling and decision making. This research suggests that the player models with HMT have clearer and more accurate movements, tackling and decision making. Men's Here are some of the data points gathered for the men's National team. We've recorded the following data points from these 12 players to ensure that the data is comparable: Age Height Weight The game of FIFA allows for a form of individual player control, at the expense of teamwork and organization. When using the Pro controllers, players can use "Ultra Player 2.0", which gives them full control over all aspects of their game. As you can see in the data below, "Ultra Player 2.0" was the setting used in these tests. FIFA 22 does not have an "Ultra Player 2.0" setting. Instead, players can use "Basic Player 2.0", which is what most people will end up using. This setting has been reduced in FIFA 22 compared to other previous iterations, and lacks the control that "Ultra Player 2.0" provides. The top row represents the "Basic Player 2.0" setting. The middle row represents the "Basic Player 2.0 + HMT" setting, which is the setting used in this research. The bottom row represents the "Basic Player 2.0" setting with "Ultra Player 2.0" turned on.
